How to Interpret Your Feedback

This report for James Parsons includes feedback received from:

1 Manager, 3 Peers, 3 Direct Reports, 3 Others, 1 Self

These survey submissions will be reported as follows*:

1 Manager, 3 Peers, 3 Direct Reports, 3 Others, 1 Self

This report compares your results to the Extraordinary Leader 90th Percentile Norm and the Extraordinary Leader 75th Percentile Norm. These norms are based on 360-degree feedback obtained from participants from a variety of companies.

As you review this report, keep in mind that feedback is meant to be constructive. You will derive the most benefit from it if you keep an open mind, rather than becoming defensive or looking for reasons why it “must be wrong.”

Definitions and Explanations:

Leadership Model	The Leadership Model displays the five behaviors of the Leadership Tent.
16 Differentiating Competencies	The 16 Differentiating Competencies presented are organized within the five behaviors of the Leadership Model. Detailed results for each of the 16 Differentiating Competencies are then presented with results listed for each item in the survey. We encourage you to review the results for each of the competencies.
Importance Ratings	This section of the report summarizes the perceptions of others regarding the relative importance of the 16 Differentiating Competencies relating to your success in your current job. Review this section to see if there is any consensus on a few competencies that would help you be more successful.
Highest & Lowest Scoring Items	The next two sections display the 10 most positively scored items and the 10 least positively scored items. This information helps you identify areas of strength and potential fatal flaws.
Response Frequency	The Response Frequency displays a detailed breakdown of how each item was responded to by each rater group; i.e. Manager, Peer, Direct Report, etc. Use this information as a reference to understand how people reacted to each survey item.
#	This is the number of raters used to calculate a particular score. Example: Even if five peers/direct reports completed your survey, you may find that an item score was calculated from only four raters. This would mean that one person left a survey item blank.
Appendix	The Appendix consists of Sections 11, 12, and 13. Sections 11 and 12 are graphs that display the same data found in Sections 3 and 4, but in a vertical layout rather than a horizontal layout. Section 13 is a table that summarizes the differences between your ratings and others' ratings of you.

How Scores are Calculated

Scores are averaged and presented by Total, Manager, Peers, Direct Reports, etc., at the Behavior, Competency and Item levels. The Total scores are calculated from group scores excluding your Self score. Responses of Don't Know/Not Applicable and missing responses are not included in the calculations.

*To help ensure anonymity for your respondents, if you received fewer than three submissions from any of your respondent groups (excluding Manager) the results for those groups will not be displayed separately. In such cases, the data from the group with insufficient submissions is combined with another group.

You are now ready to interpret your feedback.
Good luck on your journey toward becoming an Extraordinary Leader.

Your Respondents

The table below displays all of the individuals you invited to respond to your survey. The presence of a name within the table does not necessarily mean the individual submitted feedback.

To preserve anonymity, if any of the respondent types (excluding Manager) has less than three submissions, that data will be combined with responses from another rater category.

Respondent Type	Respondent Name

Peers	Alan Hodgson
Peers	David Tudor-Morgan
Peers	Hannah Morria
Direct Reports	Joanna Martin
Direct Reports	Nick Reynolds
Direct Reports	Miles Smith
Others	Paul Chambers
Others	Robert Griffin
Others	Rosanne gray

Section 7: Importance Ratings

This section displays the 16 Differentiating Competencies ranked from the most important to the least important. Raters were asked to choose four competencies that, if executed with a high level of skill and expertise, would have the most significant impact on your role. This section is not about how well you are currently performing, but is solely about how important the selected competencies are for you to be extremely effective in your current position. The asterisk (*) symbol and yellow highlighting indicate the competencies you personally rated as most important. The numbers displayed in the table below indicate the number of times each competency was selected by the various types of raters. The column labeled "Score" displays your performance on this competency, as measured by the Total score from all of your raters (excluding your Self responses).

Section 10: Written Comments

This section displays verbatim the written comments provided by your respondents. You are encouraged to read the comments without trying to individually identify the respondent. Use this section as supplemental information to clarify the numeric data and provide other perspectives not addressed in the survey.

A. Please list the leadership skills and abilities that you would consider strengths for this person.

Manager

Intellectual curiosity
Substantive knowledge
Practical experience
Candor

Peers

A humble but driven leader who communicates clearly.
Brings new ideas that are relevant

Direct Reports

Excellent communication skills and passionate about what he believes in.
Insight,
Intuition
Vision
Creativity
Resilience
Ability to listen accurately
Interest in people
Providing encouragement and meaningful support

Others

Intellect
Generosity
Compassion
Energy
Joy
Creativity
Strong communicator and motivator.
Coaching and providing feedback in honest, direct and actionable manner

Self

Ideas, energy, empathy

B. Is there anything this person does that might be considered a fatal flaw* or critical weakness? (*A fatal flaw exists when leaders have behavioral or performance issues that, if NOT addressed, could ultimately lead to career derailment or job failure.)

Manager

Can get disgruntled

Direct Reports

Hoping that many of the senior people above him have the wellbeing of the organisation at heart and are aligned with his values and the outputs they set out in the Corporate literature.

Strategic and tactical navigation in hopeless political environments, He does not tolerate fools gladly and is prepared to be honest and tell it like it is. His courageous honesty sometimes places him in difficult places.

Strong personality with very good work ethic but sometimes finds it difficult to have sufficient patience with people who cannot keep up with his quickness of mind

Others

Volatile

Introspective

Overly self-deprecating

Judgemental

Fear

Not aware of any from my dealings with him, directness of feedback whilst a strength could in some circumstances undermine his effectiveness, but in most circumstances his honesty and integrity should prevent this

Impatience

C. What leadership ability, if done exceptionally well by this person, would have the most significant impact on the productivity or effectiveness of the organization?

Manager

If put with the right people, should have a positive and practical impact on marketing and selling business and advising top tier clients

Peers

Clear vision

Encourages and supports

Direct Reports

Quickness to grasp issues, clarity of vision with ability to accurately analyse and communicate

When James sets his mind to something he often achieves mastery. (Music, public speaking, coaching, teaching and friendships.) He is excellent company and has a great sense of humour which he deploys through thick and thin! Easily carries a brand and can connect at all levels.

Others

Enthusiasm

Aligning people

Originality of thought

Listening

Thoughtfulness

I have experienced James's coaching in a 1:1 capacity, I am sure utilising this skill in a broader arena would have a significant impact on the effectiveness of any team

Idea coalescence

Section 11: Supplemental View: Leadership Tent Model

This graph displays your Total scores for the 5 Tent Poles in relation to the Extraordinary Leader norms, which are overlaid as line graphs. The Total score is an average of the scores from all competencies included in that tent pole. See the following page for a list of the competencies included in each of the tent poles. This graph provides a quick summary of your overall areas of strength. It can be used to help identify opportunities for "balancing your tent." This is an alternate way to view the key data already presented in Section 3.
